

RESTRICTED
FOREIGN AFFAIRS

1. Genesis of Present Foreign Policies.

- a. What are the basic motivations in the nation's foreign policy, i.e. those which endure without change, regardless of the type of government in power?
 - (1) To what extent are these basic motivations controlled by economic, geographic, political, social, military factors? Will these factors change materially in the foreseeable future thus changing the relative emphasis on the various motivations?
- b. How have these basic motivations determined the foreign policy of the country in the past?
- c. How do these motivations affect present foreign policy?
- d. Will these motivations continue to be effective in the future? If not, what will cause the change and how much of a revision will that effect in the nation's foreign policy?

2. Operation of Present Foreign Policy.

- a. Is the present foreign policy oriented toward the West or to the East? Why?
- b. What alliances and/or basic antipathies strengthen this orientation?
- c. Why and how were these alliances and/or antipathies originally developed? How are they manifested at present? Are there any possibilities of change in the future? What external factors are present now which might cause such a change in the future?
- d. To what extent is the country independent in pursuing its foreign policy? To what extent do its security requirements, in terms of alliances and agreements, affect the independent execution of its foreign policy?
- e. To what extent does the country rely on international organizations? UN, ICJ, various economic and technical bodies?
- f. Will the operation of the country's foreign policy affect the US in any way? How? To what extent and in what manner?

RESTRICTED